

General terms and Conditions, Responsibility & Disclaimer

Foodcultureology requires each program participant to sign and return this form acknowledging your understanding of, and agreement with the terms and conditions, upon registration. This form may be mailed or emailed to either contact above.

Foodcultureology provides culinary and cultural educational programs in Ireland and Italy. Our programs are designed for adults over the age of 21 and are not appropriate for children.

PROGRAM PRICES: All prices are per person and are stated in the program.

TRAVEL:

1. Foodcultureology is not a travel agency. It is the responsibility of each individual participant to organize travel to and from Cork, Ireland. Please review the program itinerary carefully, including program start and end dates, so that you can make travel arrangements accordingly.
2. Foodcultureology is not responsible for travel arrangements made by program participants to and from Cork, Ireland or any complications/expenses that may be associated with your travel arrangements. Participants are encouraged to purchase refundable and/or transferable airline tickets to avoid cancellation penalties if a program is cancelled for any reason. We strongly recommend the purchase of travel insurance to protect you against any cancellations or emergencies that may arise and prevent you from participating in the program.
3. We suggest that you consult a travel agent for all international travel information.
4. Each program participant is required to obtain and carry a valid passport and any other documents required by applicable government regulations. Please ensure that your passport has at least two blank, unstamped pages.

INSURANCE: Each Program Participant acknowledges that they have purchased medical and all other relevant insurance for their needs during this international trip. Consult with a travel agent for advice.
